"It's blowing in my body. Cross-breeze. Anxious movements, looking for form and meaning. I give in, crawl around in the studio and let myself be surprised. I touch and I stir. I grub about, invent, intervene, capitulate. What else can I do in the face of alternative realities generated by my images? To paint or draw is to reduce the language to signs motivated by unknown narratives. I erase insignificances and let color, lines and different materials shape new imagery for the memory to attach to. Maybe paste to. Do you understand what I mean?"
